

KUNM's new IT support person - Jonathan Longcore

by Richard S. Towne, KUNM General Manager

I am pleased to inform you that Jonathan Longcore has accepted our offer to join the Operations staff as our full time computer specialist. The official job title is Unit Information Services Support Analyst which will barely fit on a t-shirt but indicates the complexity of duties ranging from network administration, digital audio management, desktop operations and coordination for our online presence.

Jonathan Longcore

Jonathan is a long time KUNM volunteer and has a strong history of volunteering in community radio, including eight years' of volunteering as a world music producer for KPFA in Berkeley, CA.

For nearly 20 years, Jonathan worked as a systems analyst for Delta Airlines, helping to keep the computers and networks of a giant company operational. With all of that experience within a 24-hour complex operation, Jonathan is ready to take on the many challenges in our own operations.

Since 1996, Jonathan has managed his own business, "Mac Only" here in New Mexico, putting his skills as a certified Mac expert to work in many different settings. Jonathan has traveled all over the globe and is fluent in conversational Spanish. ☺

I continue to be fascinated with the issues surrounding product placement in media. I believe you are well familiar with the practice. There's that bottle of Heinz ketchup on the table during the dinner scene of your favorite movie. Then there's the long, lovely, lingering shot of the shiny new Lexus during your favorite, weekly crime drama on cable. You love the great new song on the radio by the singer Akon about his Lamborghini Gallardo.

Products masquerading as content are growing at an unstoppable rate.

Marc Cohen is a contributing writer to "Ad-Supported-Music.blogspot.com". On July 3, 2007, Marc wrote, "Product Placement is Fergilicious."

"I never thought much about product placement in music but now I need to. It has been reported (nypost.com) that Fergie signed a $4 million deal with Candies to promote the girls clothing brand in various ways, one of which is including mentions of the brand in songs on her upcoming album.

I think that if product placement in songs is done well it will not degrade the quality of the music and is definitely a plus for the artist.

Should product placement be considered a component of advertising supported music? It is advertising, and it does support the artist but what benefit does it afford the consumer? In my view, advertising support of content should lower the price of that content to the consumer.

I don't think Fergie's album will be any cheaper because of this deal (I hope it is) but I think that in the long term these deals will lead to free music supported by the advertiser. Only by lowering the price of the content will the advertiser get maximum distribution and maximum value from their investment.

My mantra has been that recorded music must emulate TV-free content supported by advertising where the metric of success is time spent with the medium. Product placement is now a staple on TV. With the advent of product placement in songs, recorded music is taking a step in the right direction."

(note by Towne: Fergie is a mega-popstar chanteuse with the best-selling band Black Eyed Peas. Fergie goes to Taco Bell in her most recent radio chart-topper. Candies, Inc. is a line of hip clothes and other fashion stuff. The article above is printed with Marc's permission. No funds were received by KUNM for publication of this information, but maybe down the road some company will want their product mentioned prominently in my column...)

Marc has the free market approach to media content and I respect his ability to take whatever position he wants on this topic. His blog is well researched and accessible to the lay person. His tracking of movement on this issue shows product placement and advertising in digital content growing exponentially, with no end in sight. Marc tracks other issues in advertising and content – all making for an interesting blog on a fascinating topic.

The music industry wants increased royalties from internet broadcasters. Now, the music industry is also pushing to collect per-play royalties from traditional "over-the-air" broadcasters. Radio has always been favored as a front-line promoter of new music. Since the advent of online content distribution, the music industry has been rocking and reeling to find anything to replace its former business models.

By definition and by federal law, KUNM provides noncommercial content. We hope to be a safe harbor from the onslaught of the hype and the hoopla, the logos and the jingles. Naturally, we will stay away from product placement in the music we offer you. If paid product placement is now trading in the millions of dollars for pop, rock and hip-hop, it won't take long for lots more musicians (from any musical format) to decide to take the plunge for product placement. Commercial radio probably can't resist the onslaught of product placement. We must and will. We deeply appreciate your help in sustaining our efforts to protect the availability of noncommercial radio in our communities. ☺

The Eleventh Hour, or the Dawn of a New Day? (Let's Work Together for the Dawn)

By Mary Oishi, Development Director

I haven't seen Leonardo DiCapprio's "Eleventh Hour," but I understand it takes up where "An Inconvenient Truth" left off, and throws in some concrete actions people are taking right now to stem the tide of environmental destruction. I must admit, I am encouraged when a high profile politician and a pop culture celebrity take up the cause of raising consciousness about saving the Earth.

Years ago I read The Hundredth Monkey, and I've held on to the idea contained in that book like a life-saving, sanity-sparing parachute ever since. In case you haven't read it, the concept is that once a critical mass of a species learns a particular thing, it spreads instantaneously to the entire population. If there is any credence in this notion, perhaps we are on the verge of a real renaissance of caring for the Earth.

In my life outside of KUNM, I am renovating a casita 50 feet behind my house. I made a conscious decision to do so as sustainably as possible. It's quite the adventure to investigate the options for heating and cooling, for efficiency, and for using products that are replenished in a much shorter time span than trees. Who says doing the right thing is drudgery? I'm enjoying the learning experience immensely.

And I know we'll all learn together and have an enjoyable time focusing on Sustainability while raising the funds we need to sustain KUNM. This Fall, for a $60 pledge, we are offering a large natural canvas totebag, manufactured and printed in California—in a guaranteed sweatshop-free facility.

In case you think using a totebag for shopping is a miniscule thing, consider this:

Last year, 24 million trees were chopped down just to produce the 10 billion paper grocery bags Americans used. Society's consumption rate is now estimated at well over 900 billion paper or plastic bags annually, or almost 2 million per minute!

It's not just the trees we need to think about—it's the oil (used in the manufacture of plastic), it's the energy wasted to manufacture and ship the bags, and it's the long-term space in the landfills when the 900 billion bags have fulfilled their short-term, one-time purpose.

If we want to see the dawn, and we want future generations to see the dawn, we really need to take every step we can right now. I invite you to tune in and participate in this Fall pledge drive, which is as much a drive to reach that "hundredth monkey" critical mass of consciousness as it is a fundraiser. Do what you can. If you can afford $5 a month, by all means let us send you a totebag. If you can afford $10 a month, ask for two. Fold them up and keep them with you so they're always ready when you go to the store.

The KUNM natural canvas reusable totebag has the potential to do the same job as an average of 2,000 paper or plastic bags over its lifetime! See them at the KUNM booth at Globalquerque, September 21 & 22.

Or, if you can afford $20 a month, ask for the solar radio headset—and let the sun power your radio listening from now on.

We also got $10,000 worth of donated prizes to reward 36 listeners who help sustain KUNM and to encourage those who never pledged to pitch in this time and help sustain the community resource they rely on. There will be 35 winners of Daily Prizes and 1 winner of the Grand Prize: a Deering Maple Blossom banjo signed by innovative banjo legend, Bela Fleck. Unsigned, it retails for $3945. What's it worth with Bela's signature? Only a stint on eBay would tell the tale, I suppose.

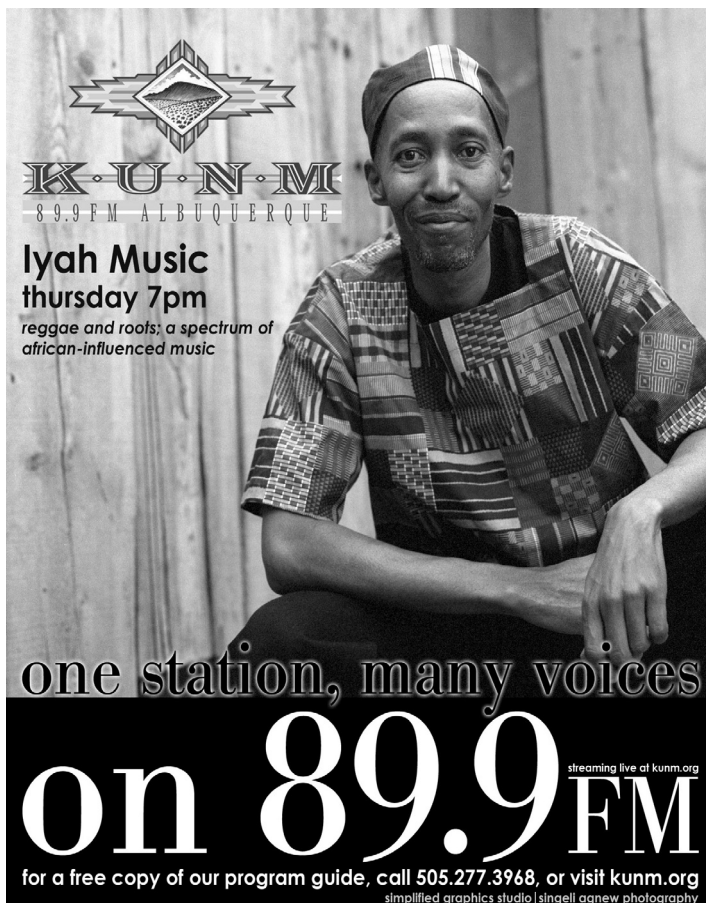

Check out the pages in this issue of Zounds! with the prizes listed. The first day will have 3 prize winners, each getting 1 pair of tickets to the New Mexico Bioneers Conference in Santa Fe, October 19-21, just as our Fall Pledge Drive ends. Some of the prizes are from retailers who specialize in sustainable products (Santa Fe Hemp and Celebro Natural Clothing). It could be argued that acoustic instruments are also sustainable prizes because they don't require energy (except breath through lips and moving fingers) to play. The exotic wood flutes are gracing my desk right now. They are beautiful beyond what the tiny photo can reveal. I hope you win one of the prizes. Some people on staff are saying that they want to quit just so they're eligible to win. They truly do envy you a little—but they're only joking about quitting, of course!

You know that I know this is not about prizes. My co-workers won't quit and you won't continue giving just for the chance to win a prize. But it's a lot of fun for all of us. Besides, 36 people WILL win, and it won't be me or any of us on KUNM's staff, so it could very easily be you. Good luck to you!

If I could get 100,000 prizes donated, I would. I want us all to win. And we will if we keep KUNM going strong. We will indeed if we keep taking these steps, one at a time, toward the dawn. ☺

6 a.m. New Dimensions. Understanding Everything, with Ervin Laszlo. What is the cosmos made of at its most fundamental level? Where does consciousness exist in the physical world? How does it fit into our understanding of evolution? What can you and I do to ensure the evolution of our species continues beyond the next generation? In this discussion Ervin Laszlo talks about politics, economics, culture, consciousness, ecology, sustainability, and spirituality, all with the deftness of one who understands the unfolding of universes as well as he grasps the nature of particulate matter. Ervin Laszlo was nominated for the Nobel Peace Prize in 2004 and 2005, and received the 2001 Goi award, also known as the Japan Peace Prize, and the 2005 Mandir of Peace Prize. He is a former professor of philosophy, systems theory, and future studies, and is founding president of the international think tank, the Club of Budapest. Program #3203.

6 a.m. New Dimensions. The Integral Perspective with Ken Wilber. As citizens of the 21st century, we have more knowledge at our fingertips than any previous generation could have imagined. But as fields of knowledge become increasingly specialized, it gets harder and harder to see how all of these disparate strands of understanding could possibly integrate into a unified whole. Ken Wilber has dedicated his life to finding just such a theory. Basing his work on the premise that “everyone is right about something,” he has for the past three decades worked tirelessly to weave all fields of knowledge together into an “integral theory of everything.” His books include such celebrated works as The Spectrum of Consciousness, Grace and Grit, A Brief History of Everything, The Marriage of Sense and Soul, and the recently released Integral Spirituality. Program #3197.

6 a.m. New Dimensions. Humanity’s Potential To Consciously Evolve, with Barbara Marx Hubbard. As a college student in the late 1940s, when the cultural norm for women was to get married and have babies, Barbara Marx Hubbard was already on the scent of looking for the best ideas to guide our future. In her research through history she realized that when a culture lost an image of its own future, which was positive to that culture, and they didn’t believe in themselves anymore, the culture declined. Dr. Barbara Marx Hubbard is a pioneer in the field of conscious evolution and is the President of the Foundation for Conscious Evolution. Some of Hubbard’s books include, The Hunger of Eve: One Woman’s Odyssey Toward the Future (Stackpole Books 1976), Revelation: Our Crisis is a Birth (Nataraj Publishing 1995), Conscious Evolution: Awakening the Power of Our Social Potential (New World Library 1998). She is also the creator of the upcoming seven part, documentary DVD series Humanity Ascending: A New Way Through Together, the first part, Our Story, is now available. To learn more about the work of Hubbard, log onto barbaramarxhubbard.com. Hosted

8 a.m. Peace Talks Radio, the series on Peacemaking and Nonviolent Conflict Resolution.

The 2008 election cycle is in full motion, so this time on Peace Talks Radio, we offer a conversation about the possible impact of electing mediators to public office. We'll talk with Dr. Dan Dana, a mediator and former candidate for the US House of Representatives in Kansas. After his failed non-adversarial bid for office, Dan created the "Elect Mediators to Public Office" project. He believes that having more mediators in public office who use a non-adversarial approach to conflict resolution would result in better political processes and better government. Of the total U.S. work force, only 6 percent are lawyers. Yet 45 percent of the members of Congress are lawyers. Would more mediators in public office change political discourse? We'll talk with other mediators who have run for public office to learn how they hope to change public service. Suzanne Kryder is host. Visit peacetalksradio.com online to hear this and other programs in the series, and to find out how you can support the non-profit effort to produce these programs.

6 a.m. New Dimensions. Living In Meaningful Coincidence: Reflections Of A Physicist, with F. David Peat. In this reflective look at the synchronicities of his life, Peat reminisces about his friendship with colleagues like fellow physicist David Bohm, brain researcher Roger Penrose, sculptor Anish Kapoor and high school physics teacher Dicky Blink. Peat's life is a kaleidoscope of meaningful coincidences in which people and ideas came to him as if by magic. Through his stories he explores the relationship between science, art, creativity, and culture. F. David Peat has a PhD in theoretical physics and is the author of over twenty books including Pathways of Chance (Pari Books 2006, 2007), Blackfoot Physics (Weiser Books, 2006), and From Certainty to Uncertainty: the Story of Science and Ideas in the Twentieth Century (Joseph Henry Press 2006). Peat is the founder of the Pari Center for New Learning in Northern Italy. To learn more about the work of Peat log onto fdavidpeat.com. Program # 3204.
