Bioneers. The internationally acclaimed energy and design strategist, Amory Lovins, shows how by 2050 we can run our energy system with no oil, coal or nuclear power. He says we can achieve that vision with clean energy and energy conservation, led by business, without an act of Congress...

Nominate Yourself for the KUNM Radio Board!

Nomination Deadline is July 13 for Provost’s Appointments to the Board. If you missed the opportunity to nominate yourself for the recent KUNM Radio Board election, you may want to think about this additional opportunity to help us serve our community.
ZOUNDS!

By Richard S. Towne, General Manager

The goal of Sidsel’s work was to provide fulltime reporting on Conservation issues across New Mexico. A pretty tall order given the magnitude of the state and the interwoven complexities of the issues and policies involved in Conservation. Sidsel did a great job, as many of you have noticed. Her work is still available on our website - KUNM Conservation Beat Archive and our Conservation blog Earth Air Waves.

In her brief tenure at KUNM, Sidsel mentored KUNM Reporter Carrie Jung. Their work together in the five-part Endangered Art of Compromise Series was powerful and fun reporting on the many intricacies involved in modern Conservation work. Well worth your time to look and listen! I am so glad that Carrie is able to help on the transition and keep the ball moving on Conservation Beat Reporting. The funder is now considering renewing support for another year. So, some heavy lifting is in order. We have the pleasure of bringing two veteran Conservation Reporters into the KUNM News Department to pick up where Sidsel left off.

Laura Paskus and Megan Kamerick are coming on board as half-time reporters on the Conservation Beat. They will be supported by existing News staff members, including Carrie Jung, who was mentored by Sidsel to provide continuity to the work.

Laura Paskus will be forwarding your comments or questions to kunm@kunm.org. Your email will be forwarded to the appropriate staff person.

Fireworks for KUNM—and You!
By Mary Oishi, KUNM Development Director

Fireworks have always been my favorite! Now I can (almost) see them from my bedroom window when they set them off at Albuquerque’s Isotopes Park. I had a friend who was born around the Fourth of July, and she always said they were setting them off to celebrate her birthday.

This year I’m going to claim the fireworks as celebration that KUNM raised what we needed to raise by June 30, 2012, the end of our fiscal year.

This is due in part to our Radio Frequency Club members who give a little each month directly from their checking account or credit card to ours. It is due in part to everyone who donated a vehicle. It is due in part to everyone who sent in or called in a donation during the past year. It is due in part to those who donated to our auction or bought something from our auction. It is due in part to the businesses and non-profits who donated to help keep our programs on their air, and we acknowledged those gifts on-air.

You were one of those people, so THANK YOU! The fireworks this year are for you too.

It is somewhat remarkable that we were able to balance the budget AND reduce our pledge drives by 2 days (that’s 14% less on-air asking). Especially when so many stations are struggling, and most NPR stations are adding a third week of on-air pledge drives in February. This is due to the overwhelming response when we asked you to give in advance by mail or web, either to renew your membership or to give an extra gift.

So on July 1st another fiscal year is upon us. In this election year it may be difficult for nonprofits, including KUNM, to compete with constant and continuous campaign fundraising. But I have faith that KUNM listeners know the value of KUNM, even in an election year (what am I saying? Especially in an election year?) and you will again do your part to keep KUNM going.

Although I have faith in KUNM’s members and the KUNM community in general, ultimately it’s way too much stress to hope above hope year after year that we will end the fiscal year with a balanced budget. After nearly 46 years of broadcasting, I think it’s high time KUNM stopped living like a family from paycheck to paycheck, hoping nothing major goes wrong so we can keep hanging on. That’s not a very healthy way to be.

So it is my goal to gather some people who believe in the future of this great community-powered radio station, and are willing to make an investment in that future for the children and grandchildren of New Mexico. I’ll share my personal goal with you right here: it is to have an endowment of at least $1 million (promised, if not in hand) and a reserve fund of $1 million dollars by the time I retire. So far there is $300,000 promised. So we’re nearly one-third of the way there.

If you think KUNM is important enough that it should be living with a savings account and a long-term endowment, when you hear those announcements on KUNM later this month, give me a call.

My thanks may not be as colorful as fireworks, but I will heartily celebrate the legacy we will be building together.
KUNM thanks the Moab Folk Festival November 2 - 4, 2012 and ¡Globalquerque! September 21 - 22, 2012 for donating 2 weekend passes.

11 am. RadioLab. Stochasticity. Stochasticity (a wonderfully slippery and smarty-pants word for randomness), may be at the very foundation of our lives. To understand just how big a role it plays, we look at chance and patterns in sports, lottery tickets, and even the cells in our own body. And we meet two girls named Laura, whose unlikely meeting seems to defy pure chance.

6 pm. Radio Theater. “The Parker Shotgun” by Sue Grafton. Sue Grafton’s California investigator Kinsey Millhone was one of several female operatives who brought a new perspective in the 1980s to the formerly male-dominated private-detective trade. Her eye proved just as keen as her predecessors’ at spotting the pertinent details to crack a tough case. In this 1986 story, Millhone finds an object to rival any Maltese Falcon or Brasher Doubloon in fatal value. Read by Harriet Harris. Directed by Robert Egan, with original music by Karl Lundeberg. From the series “Mean Streets of the United States.”

Saturday, July 21
6 am. New Dimensions. “Intelligent Evolution,” with Nicki Scully. Healer, Nicki Scully, tells us that it’s time for us to consciously evolve. We must continue to heal ourselves as we join with others to heal the planet.

Sunday, July 22
11 am. RadioLab. After Life. What happens at the moment we slip from life...to the other side? Is it a moment? If it is, when exactly does it happen? And what happens afterward? It’s an episode full of questions that don’t have easy answers. Radiolab stirs down the very moment of passing and speculates about what may lay beyond.

6 pm. Radio Theater. “Argonautica,” Part 1. We follow Jason and his heroic band of Argonauts on their quest to claim the golden fleece. Along the way, they will encounter powerful gods, fearsome warriors, nightmarish creatures, and other thrilling challenges. Performed before a live audience by Chatterbox Audio Theatre.

He says we can achieve that vision with clean energy and energy conservation, led by business, without an act of Congress or any new inventions. By making this transition, we can save more than $5 trillion and double the size of the US economy.

6 am. New Dimensions. “Taking Back Our Democracy,” with Steve Bhaerman Aka Swami Beyondanada. For more than two decades Steve Bhaerman has shared his wit and wisdom in the countenance of Swami Beyondanada. In this dialogue he takes off his turban for some straight talk--not without a note of humor, but as himself, a crusader for the reclamation of our power as citizens of the United States.

Sunday, July 29
11 am. RadioLab. Colors. Our world is saturated in color, from the softest hues to the most lurid, violent stains. But it’s hard to put your finger on how something so intangible can have such a visceral punch. This hour, we ask how the pigments around us color our thoughts, and wonder how much of what we see is on the outside...and how much is created in our heads. From Sir Isaac Newton sticking a needle in his eye, to a sea creature that sees a rainbow far beyond what humans can experience.

6 pm. Radio Theater. “Argonautica,” Part 2. We follow Jason and his heroic band of Argonauts on their quest to claim the golden fleece. Along the way, they will encounter powerful gods, fearsome warriors, nightmarish creatures, and other thrilling challenges. Performed before a live audience by Chatterbox Audio Theatre.
