Thanks to Our 151 Volunteers!
Poverty and Public Health in Bernalillo County

By Richard S. Towne, General Manager

KUNM is building the launch of our multi-year commitment to reporting on poverty and public health in New Mexico. Our first staff members will be joining us in October as we gear up with a part-time project coordinator and a full-time journalist. For now, I’ll share some revealing details of a brand new report on health disparity in Bernalillo County.

If you live in a poor part of Bernalillo county, you live in a community with a 12-fold difference in the percentage of low birth-weight infants compared to the wealthy communities in the county.

If you live in a poor part of Bernalillo county, you live with a higher concentration of toxic industrial wastes. You have a life expectancy that is 5.2 years shorter than the average person in Bernalillo county.

This is our county. This is where we live. In a place where a child of a poor community is EXPECTED to live 22 years less than a child in a wealthy community. By setting our health and environment statistics into a geo-spatial frame (census tracks in our county) this study makes the references to disparity on social justice abundantly clear. This is a story that needs to be told, and KUNM will tell it well.

We don’t often hear the voices of poor and vulnerable people in commercial broadcasting because these people are of no use to advertisers. Poor people are not the desired demographic. Instead, commercial broadcasters wince their way through the latest state rankings for research on poverty and public health. You know the mantra, “48th in this good stat” or “3rd highest in the nation in this bad stat.”

Rank-based reporting actually disconnects you from the people in the picture. You feel powerless and shrug off the report. “What can I do?” “How can I, just one person, make a difference when we are always in last place?” A complacency exists, a lack of engagement, when all we have to go on is being on the bottom of the pile.

As a public radio station, KUNM can and will put a voice to this story. Our goal is to report the facts, investigate the policies and practices that perpetuate poverty in our state, and to engage you in a meaningful way so you can take action and become engaged yourself to change this story’s ending.

From the Introduction to the report, “Place matters for health in important ways. Research demonstrates that neighborhood conditions—the quality of public schools, housing conditions, access to medical care and healthy foods, levels of violence, availability of exercise options, exposure to environmental degradation—powerfully predict who is healthy, who is sick, and who lives longer. And because of patterns of residential segregation, patterns that are largely a legacy of our history of racial and ethnic discrimination, differences in neighborhood conditions are the fundamental causes of health inequities found among different racial, ethnic and socioeconomic groups. This study examined the relationships in Bernalillo County, NM between place, ethnicity, and health.”

Among the Conclusions in the report, “While there is a strong moral imperative to enact policies to improve health for all, there also is a powerful economic incentive. A study released by the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies in 2009 found that direct medical costs associated with health inequities among African Americans, Hispanic Americans, and Asian Americans approached $230 billion between 2003 and 2006. When indirect costs, such as lowered productivity and lost tax revenue resulting from illness and premature death were included, the total cost of health inequities exceeded $1.24 trillion. Thus, for both moral and economic reasons, we must address health inequities and their root causes now.”

The full report, including the GIS and Methods appendices can be found at Place Matters Report on Bernalillo County. The report was published on September 5, 2012 by the Joint Center for Political and Economic Studies, Health Policy Institute in Washington, DC. The report, and KUNM’s programming on Poverty and Public Health, are generously funded by the W. K. Kellogg Foundation.

Elections are about people and choices. They’re about the relationship between a government and its policies and the ordinary citizens who vote that government in - or out. Sometimes amidst the rhetoric and spectacle of the campaigning season, we forget this simple fact.

In this light, KUNM News will air a series of family profiles from around New Mexico as a key focus for our election coverage. The Voices Behind the VOTE series will feature frank views on the election and the candidates from New Mexico voters and their families.

The folks we’ve chosen reflect the diversity of the citizenry here, a cross-section of the ethnic, racial, economic, cultural and geographic complexity of our state. Tune in on Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Thursdays during the final four weeks before the November 6th election to hear the profiles and visit us online at KUNM.org for photos of the voters and the opportunity to comment on the series.

KUNM will air the Presidential and Vice Presidential debates throughout the month of October. We’ll also have updates on other political debates for the New Mexico’s Congressional races online at KUNM.org in coming weeks.

Then, tune in for live Election Night Coverage hosted by KUNM’s Elaine Baumgartel. We’ll have results and updates on local and state elections from political analysts, plus live anchored coverage of races across the country from NPR.
If you ever listen to (or watch) commercial media, you're probably sick to death of all of those “Tell Heather Wilson…” and “Tell Martin Heinrich…” ads, paid for by who-knows-who with a particular agenda one way or the other. It tells you nothing whatsoever that is meaningful about the candidates, or the views of the candidates, or the ways in which they would or would not represent you.

It’s so refreshing in this election season to listen to KUNM, with NOT ONE SINGLE POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT from any PAC or political campaign! Instead, we offer equal-time interviews with the candidates, coverage of the debates, and analysis that really digs into their views on a variety of important matters of public policy and governance.

That also means we don’t get a dime of those millions and billions of dollars being doled out by the campaigns, parties, and PACs. Which is why we turn to you, our contributing members, to say “Thank you for keeping KUNM free of the clutter of ads rampant nearly everywhere else during this campaign season,” (and to say so by contributing to keep it that way).

In the last five years listener/members (that’s you!) have shown their appreciation by providing 54% of what it takes to keep KUNM broadcasting—and doing so commercial-free. A few have sent us thousands of dollars in those five years, but most have sent $20, $40, $75, $100, or a few dollars a month.

Still others have donated their old vehicles. Proceeds from cars and trucks went from $25,000 per year to $120,000 per year!!! What a huge help! Some have donated to (and/or purchased from) KUNM’s on-line auctions. That is slated to become a growing area of funding for us as well. (See page 11).

In the aggregate, listener donations amount to over half of what it takes to keep this station humming 24 hours a day, 7 days a week, 24 hours a day. And together, our contributing listeners are the equivalent of “majority shareholders” in this community-powered public radio station. That’s one of the things that makes KUNM so special.

Local businesses and non-profit organizations underwrite programs and provide another 25% of KUNM’s support. Their announcements never include prices, never assail your ears with sales or gimmicks. But combined with what individual contributing listeners give, local community support stands at nearly 80%. No wonder we say, “KUNM: New Mexico’s Community-Powered Public Radio.”

As you can see, without listener donations there would be no KUNM. So next time you hear a real interview with a candidate, or an uninterrupted debate—and not a “Tell the candidate” this or that—you can smile, knowing YOU are the one who approved this message.

Here is where our total budget comes from:

- 54% Listener Contributions
- 25% Underwriting (business/nonprofit)
- 13% Corporation for Public Broadcasting
- 4% UNM Student Fees
- 4% Private Foundation Grants

(The University of New Mexico also provides indirect non-cash support valued in excess of $400,000 annually)

Rubén Martínez is a journalist, author, musician, and professor of literature and writing at Loyola Marymount University in Los Angeles. In Desert America he writes of his time in Northern New Mexico—a world of “outrageous wealth and devastating poverty, sublime beauty and ecological ruin.” His wife to be, a medical anthropologist, was preparing her dissertation on the social and historical dimensions of heroin addiction, suggested the move. It’s therefore understandable that they chose the Espanola Valley which leads the nation in the rate of heroin addiction and death by overdose. What Martínez’ wife did not know was that Martínez himself was a heroin addict who went along with her suggestion in order to “get clean.” Please join host Stephen Spitz as we talk about Hispanos of Northern New Mexico, along with history, poverty and drug addiction in the Espanola Valley. Produced with the assistance of Joe Green.

6 pm. Radio Theatre: “Tread Softly Bill Lizard.” (continued), from Crazy Dog Audio Theatre. The journey continues after American private-eye Bill Lizard is thrown off his speeding train of thought. He becomes an unwilling Yankee tourist fumbling through a surreal tapestry of Irish literary parody, social satire and some good ol’ slapstick. In this episode he finds he must handwash his Psyche in the Celtic Stream of Consciousness.

6 am. New Dimensions: “Stop Working On Yourself and Start Living,” with Ariel & Shya Kane. The Kane’s describe the 4 principles of true transformation: 1) deep listening 2) anything you resist persists 3) in the current moment you can only be exactly how you are 4) Anything you allow to be exactly as it is, without judging it, completes itself.

Sunday, October 21
11 am. “The 14th annual Homelessness Marathon.” This year KUNM will partner with six radio stations around the United States to bring the stories of the homeless to the air. We will hear reports from New Mexico, Illinois, Maine, Indiana, Vermont, New Hampshire, Oregon and New York. The Homelessness Marathon features live call-ins via a national toll-free number. More info at HomelessnessMarathon.org

6 pm. Radio Theatre: “Brad Lansky and the Alien Engineer.” After returning from their mission to Planet X, Brad and Alex have a tough time trying to get their ship to pass its maintenance review. Even though their mission had been highly successful by many standards, no sentient press agents on Earth have shown the slightest interest at their return. Surely their findings were newsworthy?! Then one of the most powerful A.I.’s in the world requests their immediate presence and offers compelling arguments for a risky mission to an unchartered system twenty thousand light years away. Could this A.I.’s theory about the origin of the alien they found at Planet X be right? A Protophonic production.

6 am. New Dimensions: “A Wild and Laughing God,” with Tessa Bielecki. A former Carmelite monastic nun and abbess, Bielecki brings a fresh, playful, spacious approach to your relationship to the divine. She says, “We’ve turned Christianity into a dull, dry system . . . God isn’t like that. God is wild and definitely untamed.”

Sunday, October 28
11 am. Sunday Specials: The Moth. A flight attendant describes how she adjusts her attitude while up in the air; a Vietnamese family is forced to flee from their home to take refuge in an unknown land; and after running out of gas, a young preacher in 1960s Texas ends up in a pool hall. Hosted by The Moth’s Artistic Director, Catherine Burns.

6 pm. Radio Theatre: “The Cabinet Doctor Caligari,” adapted by Yuri Rasovsky. Read by John De Lancer and others. Inspired by the classic silent film of 1919, this original audio play won the Independent Publishers Award in 1998 for best direct-to-audio production. John de Lancer stars as a young poet who visits a fair one night with his friend and girlfriend. Entering Dr. Caligari’s tent, they meet the mysterious Cesare, a kind of zombie, who is neither alive nor dead—and who forecasts doom for our high-strung protagonist and his friends.

DID YOU KNOW?
If it weren’t for our business support, we would need 3 full pledge drives per year!
So, please take the time to thank the businesses that support KUNM.
