Shadows of Liberty screening in early May; Santa Fe and Albuquerque

By Richard S. Towne, General Manager

A phone call in April from Debra Brown had me saying “yes, without a doubt”. Debra works at a place called Doc Factory. Doc Factory was created in 2005 “to produce independent documentary films to bring awareness and inspire change for important social issues worldwide.”

Debra told me Doc Factory’s 2012 film “Shadows of Liberty” would be screening on May 3rd in Santa Fe and May 4th in Albuquerque. She wanted to know KUNM would help get the word out as a film sponsor and participant in a panel discussion following the screening. “Tell me more.” I said.

Debra e-mailed me this, “Shadows of Liberty is dedicated to the journalists and information freedom fighters, the heroes of our time, who dedicate their lives to our right to freedom of information - the central pillar of a free society. Shadows of Liberty provides a platform for voices that have been silenced and in doing so, attempts to inspire change and accountability. This film champions the idea of an independent media where truth and integrity are the norm, not the exception.

Okay, you have my attention. “Who is in it?” I asked.

Debra says, “Danny Glover, Julian Assange, Dan Rather, Amy Goodman, David Simon, Norman

Solomon, Bob Bear, Roberta Baskin, John MacArthur, Daniel Ellsberg, Janine Jackson, Chris Hedges, Robert McChesney, Kristina Borjesson and John Nichols.”

“Oh, goodness,” I said. “Is that THE Dan Rather?”

“Yes, its that Dan Rather” she said. Debra e-mailed later with this description, “In highly revealing stories, renowned journalists, activists and academics give insider accounts of a broken media system. Controversial news reports are suppressed, people are censored for speaking out, and lives are shattered as the arena for public expression is turned into a private profit zone.”

“Sign us up, please,” I replied.

Shadows of Liberty will screen Sunday, May 3 at 5:00 PM at Center For Progress and Justice, 1420 Cerrillos Road, as part of the first annual Santa Fe Labor Film Festival.

The film will show in Albuquerque on Monday, May 4, at 7:30 PM at the Albuquerque Center for Peace and Justice, 202 Harvard SE.

The screenings are sponsored by the American Civil Liberties Union of New Mexico, Central New Mexico Labor Council, Central New Mexico Move to Amend, Common Cause New Mexico, Doc Factory, KUNM, KSFR, the Southwest Organizing Project, and Veterans for Peace. After the screenings, there will be panel discussions.

KUNM Public Health Reporting Update

By Rashad Mahmood

Public Health New Mexico is contributing to the Fronteras Desk, a public media content-sharing network throughout the Southwest. Over the last couple of months, stories on gun violence, drug courts, pollution in the Rio Grande, and others have been heard by public radio listeners in Texas, Arizona, Nevada, and California.

County drug courts. Ed Williams reported on the opening of the acequias this year and the local food movement that is improving health in New Mexico, as well as profiling the problem of heroin addiction and how medical providers are using the internet to help close treatment gaps.

Keep an eye out for reporting in May on the health impacts of polluted storm water runoff, problems with the transition from jail back into society, and a look at environmental pollution that impacts Cochiti Pueblo.

Thanks for tuning in! For all of our Public Health reporting, including web exclusives, photos, and extended interviews, check out our project website: www.publichealthnm.org KUNM's Public Health New Mexico reporting project is funded by the W.K. Kellogg foundation.

New Mexico People Places and Ideas:
The Search for the Last Unicorn – It’s a Real Animal

In 1992, in a remote mountain range, a team of scientists discovered the remains of an unusual animal with 2 beautiful long, curved horns which, from the side, merged into one—a “unicorn”. It turned out to be a living species new to western science -- a saola, the first large land mammal discovered in 50 years. The Last Unicorn is the story of William deBuys’ search to find and understand an elusive and exceptionally rare species in the heart of Southeast Asia’s jungles. Along the way, deBuys’ expedition collects 970 snares set to capture all manner of wildlife for sale in Vietnam and China, where demand for wild meats and ingredients for medicinal treatments is voracious. Indeed, much of the book concentrates on the feeble conservation efforts occurring in one of the world’s most species-rich regions. Join host Stephen Spitz as we journey with one of our best-known conservation writers through the wilds of Laos in search of the saola. Produced with assistance of Jefferson White and Lynn Schibeci.

Climate One — Future Food

Unpredictable weather has always been the farmer's Achilles heel. And the weather is getting wilder, stressing water supplies and changing where crops can grow. How do we address food security for a growing global population? One approach is getting back to basics. Protecting the soil, growing food for people – not for cows – and cutting down food waste. Simple solutions can create a big pay-back.

Intelligence Squared US — Has the President exceeded his authority by waging war without Congress?

The President has launched a sustained, long-term military campaign against the Islamic State of Iraq and the Levant. But did he have constitutional power to do so? The Constitution carefully divides the war powers of the United States between Congress and the President. Article II provides that "The President shall be Commander in Chief." But Article I provides that "The Congress shall have Power ... To Declare War." In this case, Congress has not declared war; the President ordered the attacks unilaterally. Did he exceed his authority and violate the Constitution?

Radio Theatre: “A Different Engine,” by Charles Moster

The story of the 19th C. English mathematician Charles Babbage who originated the idea of a programmable computer in the 1820s. He was helped by Ada Lovelace, a brilliant mathematician and daughter of the poet Lord Byron. She was among the few of Babbage’s contemporaries who fully understood his ideas. Working with him, she developed a program, which, had Babbage’s invention actually been built, would have been able to calculate a sequence of Bernoulli numbers. Based on this work, Lovelace is now widely credited with being the first computer programmer. A Different Engine was originally produced for KUNM’s Radio Theatre by Camino Real Productions LLC, in 2008, directed by Linda López McAlister and stars Scott Sharot as Charles Babbage and Alexa Bauer as Ada Lovelace.

Intelligence Squared US — Is smart technology making us dumb?

Smart technology grants us unprecedented, immediate access to knowledge and to each other—a ubiquitous and seamless presence in everyday life. But is there a downside to all of this connectivity? It’s been said that smart technology creates dependency on devices, narrows our world to echo chambers, and impairs cognitive skills through shortcuts and distraction. Are smart tech devices guiding so much of our decision making that we are losing autonomy without even realizing it? Or are these concerns an overstatement of the negative effects of high-tech consumption?

6:00 p.m. Radio Theatre: Two pieces from The Wireless Theatre Company

"Hitler vs. Henry Ford" by Stuart Price. A true account of when Henry Ford met Adolf Hitler in a nightclub and formed an unlikely friendship. Recorded live at The Pleasance King Dome as part of Wireless Theatre's 'Couples Who Changed The World' season for The Edinburgh Fringe Festival, 2014.

"The End of Gray's Malaise," written and performed by Paul Trussell, is a darkly comic tale of fear, dysfunction and redemption. It's been ten million, two hundred and forty eight thousand, four hundred and eighty seven minutes and nineteen seconds since Webster Gray left the walls of his rented flat.

However this morning something different is happening. Though Webster Gray remains not only perfectly content but adamantly resolute he will never again venture into the outside world, his own body has other ideas and makes a powerful break for freedom.
