Also coming in January? We’ll be rolling out the nomination phase for the four elected seats on the KUNM Radio Board. These biennial elections are for terms that run from May 2017 through April 2019. Listen for announcements on KUNM and here in Zounds! Think about nominating yourself or your best friend to serve on our advisory board. Voting takes place in March / April 2017.

November looks to be a very exciting month, what with the Presidential and statewide elections and the aftermath. We look forward to bringing you all of the news in the very best way we know how. These will be plenty of work to do in the weeks (and months?) ahead so the inflow of energy you provided for KUNM during our Fall fundraiser is coming just at the right time.

You’re among the first to know that Thornburg Foundation in Santa Fe has given a $30,000 grant to support a Journalism collaboration between KUNM, NMPBS (KNME), UNM’s New Mexico News Port (Department of Communications and Journalism), and the independent online journalism center NM In-Depth for coverage of the 60-day NM Legislative session in January 2017.

This is a repeat performance for Thornburg and this time they have upped the game in terms of supporting cross-platform news coverage by public media at UNM for the Legislative session. If you are new to the NM News Port, you should know that News Port is a journalism laboratory at UNM where students learn journalism by doing journalism. NM News Port is led by long-time public media news leader Michael Marcotte. His students will be side by side with the journalists at KUNM, NMPBS and NM In-Depth. Count on us for deep and credible coverage.
Was it the Volvo?

By Mary Oishi, Development Director

What a record 50th Anniversary fundraiser we had!!! The goal was $250,000, and we reached $202,000 by the end of the Iyah Music Show on Thursday night. Knowing there have been a few great final Fridays when we ended with a $50,000 day by 10 pm, I was cautiously optimistic that we would reach the goal.

Then when I arrived at the station in time to try to match the challenge grant on Native America Calling, I saw that $20,000 had already come in to the phone room, not counting web donations. My optimism was suddenly far less cautious. I was feeling confident!

Then came Mary B. and Harry’s Friday Freeform 50th Anniversary Fundraising Fiesta—and wow! They got 70 calls and topped $7000 by phone and web. Everyone was nearly floating in here. By the end of Democracy Now, we had reached our $250,000 goal. We went on to add $2000 that arrived in the mail that day, and $22,000 was called in or pledged on-line during All Things Considered and Salsa Sabrosa. So we ended the drive with over $276,000, meaning we had a $74,000 day!!! I do believe that is a record in our 50 year history!

So people ask me, “Was it the Volvo?” Yes, it was the Volvo, at least in part. It may have been the possibility of winning a Volvo that caused 219 new members to join. It may have been the fact that we were no longer accepting entries after 10 pm on Friday that caused so many people to be sure to get in before that time. It may have been the Limited Edition 50th Anniversary tee shirt that also went away as a thank you gift at 10:01 pm Friday night. But I believe it was more.

I also think that all of the people who sent in or donated on-line ahead of time contributed a great deal to the success of the on-air portion. I say that because I told all of the on-air hosts during training that we had a great wind at our backs, that the existing members had already moved us $80,000 toward our goal. You have no idea how good that makes them feel! When they go on the microphone, they are happy. They feel loved and supported, not whiny and desperate. That positive attitude puts the rest of the listeners at ease. It makes them feel like giving, like joining a good thing. So if you were one of those people, thank you so much!!!

A friend said “Thanks to Donald Trump.” I understood his meaning. While the mainstream media harps on the same few campaign stories until we’re all sick to death of hearing them, KUNM offers political-commercial-free, in-depth thoughtful coverage, with candidate forums, a wide range of opinions and perspectives, and features and music that feel like an emotional bath in a pretty yucky political season. One of my friends said, “KUNM has kept me sane this year. Thank you.” Yeah. Me too. I think a lot of people were saying that with their contributions.

Also, who doesn’t get excited when history is being made and they get to be part of it? It was, after all, our 50th Anniversary fundraiser. KUNM actually started in October of 1966. But it’s our 50th all year. So now that you have been part of this milestone occasion, stay with us and enjoy what you have helped to make possible.

If you ordered a tee shirt or two, please be patient. We had a record number of donations, but we don’t have any more staff to process it all than we did before. So after the beautiful mountain of pledges is entered into the computer, we can ask the database how many of each size to order. Then we will send our precise order to the silk screener, and when we receive them we will get a corps of volunteers to come in and help us fold them and send them to you. We hope it can all be accomplished before Thanksgiving, at which time you will be thankful to get the great-looking shirt and we will still be thankful for your generosity—and thanks to you, will still be producing great radio to keep you informed and inspired (and sane) no matter what else happens in November.
By Rashad Mahmood

Here are a few stories we did to take your mind off of the 2016 election. That’s if you don’t want to binge on all of our election coverage, including candidate debates, forums, interviews, voter voices, and more. Either way, we have you covered.

In October, Marisa Demarco wrapped up her in-depth coverage of the murder trial of two former APD officers who shot James Boyd. The case ended in a mistrial due to a hung jury, with three jurors voting guilty and nine voting not guilty. It was the first time in recent memory that Albuquerque police officers were charged with murder.

Marisa’s stories on the trial included the strategies prosecution and defense lawyers pursued, analysis of the underlying legal issues, detailed reporting on the opening and closing statements, a heartfelt message from James Boyd’s brother, and a look at how situations like Boyd’s can be prevented.

On October 17, Ed Williams launched the website for his Annenberg Health Journalism project that’s exploring the impact Rio Arriba County’s high rate of opioid addiction is having on children there. He reached out to high school students about their experiences, and we’re posting them anonymously to our new website, highschool.life.

He also reported on the controversy at La Montanita Co-Op. A petition has been launched by a group of members calling themselves Take Back the Co-op to recall the current board of directors. The dispute centers around the introduction of non-organic produce, labor practices, and other issues.

This month look for more stellar reporting from the Public Health New Mexico team including post-election coverage and much more. All of our work is available at publichealthnm.org. KUNM’s Public Health New Mexico is supported by the W.K. Kellogg Foundation, McCune Charitable Foundation, and the Con Alma Health Foundation.

Congratulations to Marisa Demarco!

Marisa Demarco is KUNM’s new General Assignment Reporter. On the Public Health New Mexico beat, Marisa led coverage statewide on many crucial issues including the behavioral health crisis, police violence, sexual assault policies, healthcare for people in prisons and jails, the food stamps program scandal, and many other topics.

Going forward she’ll get to broaden her reporting focus beyond public health stories. She’s excited. And we can’t wait to hear the engaging, thoughtful reporting that she’ll produce.

New Mexico People Places and Ideas

This election is shaping up to be one of the most interesting in years with public interest at an all time high. In the national races for President and control of the US Senate, recent polls indicate that Democrats have a small but significant advantage while control of US House appears safely in control of Republicans. In New Mexico, Democrats are said to have a better than 50/50 chance to regain control of the House and are even more likely to retain control of the Senate. All of these prognostications, however, are dependent on voter turnout which is predominantly focused on Hispanics and Millennials. Joining host Stephen Spitz to talk about voter turnout and Tuesday’s election will be members of UNM’s political science faculty. Produced with assistance of Jefferson White and Lynn Schibeci.

Saturday, November 5

New Dimensions: “Protecting the Sacred White Lions” with Linda Tucker

The white lions of Africa are considered sacred and they have been trophy hunted until they no longer live in the wild. Tucker has taken on the assignment to reintroduce them into their traditional hunting lands. This is the story of her decades long battle with the government and with breeders who charge huge fees to hunters to kill the recently caged lions. Linda Tucker is the author of Saving The White Lion: One Woman’s Battle for Africa’s Most Sacred Animal

The Evolution of Evolution

Darwinian evolution is adaptive and slow. Millenia can go by before a species changes very much. But with the tools of genetic engineering we can now make radical changes in just one generation. By removing genes or inserting new ones, we can give an organism radically different traits and behaviors. We are taking evolution into our own hands. It all began with the domestication of plants and animals, which one science writer says created civilization. Today, as humans tinker with their own genome, is it possible we will produce Homo Sapiens 2.0? Also, what happens to those species who can’t control their destiny? This program explores how climate change is forcing the biggest genetic reshuffling in recorded history.

New Dimensions: “The ‘Narrative Intelligence’ of the Greek Myths” with Carol Pearson, Ph.D.

Most of us are trapped in the stories we tell ourselves. Archetypes, such as are found in the Greek... myths, can trigger a story in our brain that helps us notice opportunities, props, and characters that may have been invisible to us. They change what we are noticing and can enhance our narrative intelligence and encourage us to tap into our potential. Are you skeptical? Sure, you raise an eyebrow when some Nigerian prince asks for your bank numbers, or when a breakfast cereal claims that it will turn your kid into a professional athlete overnight. But what do you really know about the benefits of organic milk? Or the power of whitening ingredients in your toothpaste? How credible is what you read on Twitter? Today, information overwhelms us, and the need to keep our skeptical wits about us has never been greater. We follow Seth around as he faces the daily onslaught of hype and hokum. It’s Skeptic Check, our monthly look at critical thinking … but don’t take our word for it!

Radio Theatre: Spoon River Anthology, Part 2

In 1915 Edgar Less Masters published Spoon River Anthology, a collection of short free-form poems that collectively narrates the epitaphs of the residents of Spoon River, Illinois, a fictional small town named after the real Spoon River that ran near Masters’ home town. The aim of the poems is to demystify the rural, small town American life. Chatterbox Audio Theatre as been working for several years on their radio adaptation of this classic work. We broadcast Part 1 last year and are happy that we can now bring you Part 2, which features the lives of 50 additional deceased residents of Spoon River.

Venom Diagram

We all get defensive sometimes. For some animals, evolution has provided a highly effective mechanism for saying “back off!” A puncture by a pair of venom-filled fangs gets the point across nicely. But one animal’s poison may be another’s cure. Some dangerous critters churn out compounds that can be synthesized into life-saving drugs. Meet the spiny, fanged, and oozing creatures who could help defend us against such illnesses as hypertension and kidney disease. Plus, the King of Pain—a scientist who has been stung by more than 80 species of insects in his pursuit of a better understanding of venom’s biochemistry. Find out which winged stinger scored the highest on his pain index. And why the drug we need most may come from the quietest members of the biosphere: turning to plants for a new generation of antibiotics.

But a tragic accident forces their community of family and friends to put their most deeply-held beliefs to the test. Hey, let’s meet last week for coffee. Okay, we can’t meet in the past—yet. But could it be only a matter of time before we can? In an attempt to defy the grandfather paradox, scientists try sending a photon back in time to destroy itself. Also, find out how teleportation allows particles to instantaneously skip through space-time and why sending humans wouldn’t violate the laws of physics. But before you pack your bags for that instantaneous trip to Paris, we need to understand the nature of time. A physicist offers a testable theory and ponders how it bears on free will. Plus, do you feel as if time comes to a standstill when you’re standing in line? Learn some tricks for altering your perception of time while you wait. Some businesses already use them on you.
